

The BBC site uses cookies to improve your visit. Some are always on, others you can choose. Cookies help remember your site choices.

England lost a football match to Senegal. It was their first loss since October. The match was friendly, and fans were unhappy.

Thomas Tuchel is England's new manager. He says not to worry about losing. He's trying new players and ideas before the World Cup.

Before playing Senegal, England won three games without letting in goals. Fans and players felt sad about losing and wanted to do better.

The World Cup is in a year. Some think Tuchel can make changes. Others worry there's not enough time to fix problems before then.

England's team is doing well. They have more matches to play before the World Cup to get ready and improve.