

Soldiers are in Los Angeles after night protests about police raids on people without papers. Many people were taken by the police.

There have been fights near a big government building. Regan Morris is there for the BBC. You can find out more on the BBC's live page.

People in Los Angeles are upset. The police used strong ways like tear gas to stop protests. This made the protests more intense.

Protests in the US are about immigration. People talk about how the government treats those without papers. It's a big issue.
