

Reform UK got new councillors in local elections but is finding it hard to work with other parties. Many councils need parties to work together.

Reform UK in Worcestershire and Leicestershire tries to run councils alone. Other parties avoid them as they focus on national, not local, issues.

In Cornwall, Reform UK won most seats but couldn't form a council. Other parties joined up. Reform UK said it was unfair.

Reform UK's councillors are learning their roles. They need training and support. The party wants strong councillors to be future leaders.

Reform UK must team up with other parties to make changes in local councils. It's new and hard, but important for progress.