

The UK is making a new law for self-driving cars to keep them safe and help businesses understand their duties.

The government plans to test driverless cars in 2026 to help the UK lead in new technology.

They want to make self-driving cars safe like human drivers. The government asks for ideas to help people trust these cars.

The government has a new plan to use AI in transport to make it better. They will share it with important people and put it online.