

Harry Lowe was a soldier from Derby who died in World War 1. His grave in Belgium was unmarked for 100 years but is now identified and marked.

Harry was honoured at a ceremony by the Ministry of Defence. His family and military members gathered at Tyne Cot Cemetery for his new headstone.

A soldier fought bravely in 1917. His body was found and now he is remembered with a special headstone.