

Millie Bright, an England footballer, won't play in the Euros this summer because she's tired and needs rest after many games last season.

Millie is the third England player to miss the Euros. Mary Earps and Fran Kirby also won't play. Millie wants to focus on her health and future.

Millie's teammates support her decision. They are proud. England manager Sarina Wiegman said Millie should care for herself.

The Euros is a big football event in Switzerland. England's team is missing key players. They will share their final team soon.

Millie played 88 times for England, was captain in the World Cup final loss to Spain, and was part of the team that won the Euros in 2022.
