

Cookies are small files that help websites work. Some are always on, others you can choose to turn on.

England's women's football team is ready for Euro 2025. Coach Sarina Wiegman says there's no crisis, despite losing three key players. The team feels good.

Three players left: Mary Earps and Fran Kirby retired, and Millie Bright took a health break. The team is still strong, says Wiegman.

Women's football is getting more attention. More people are watching and talking about it. It's important to stay focused and keep working hard.

Wiegman supports her players on and off the field. She hopes they stay fit and happy. The team is excited and ready for the tournament.