

A ban on disposable vapes in the UK starts Sunday to stop young people using them and cut waste. Some think it won't work as reusable vapes are similar.

Hazel Cheeseman says reusable vapes look like disposables and are cheap. She wants more rules to make vaping less appealing to young people.

Kate Pike worries people will throw away reusable vapes like disposables, which won't help the environment. They cost the same, so this might happen.

The government wants to reduce vape waste and make them less appealing to kids. Some suggest bigger vape tanks to increase costs and change all vape rules.
