

Farm workers in California hide in fields because they are scared of being sent away. They do not have the right papers to stay.

ICE officers visit farms to arrest people. Workers are scared to leave home or work because they fear being caught and sent away.

Raids happen because the President promised to send people without papers home. This made many people angry, and some have protested.

Some farm workers don't have the right papers. If they can't work, there might not be enough people to pick fruits and vegetables.

Shop and restaurant owners are worried because farm workers staying home means fewer customers and less money for their businesses.

A worker selling strawberries is scared. He needs to work for his family. He wants to stay legally but is unsure how with many officers around.