

A man was stuck by a rock in a cold creek in Alaska. His wife kept his head above water while they waited for help.

A sled dog company sent a helicopter to help. Rescuers used air bags and strength to lift the rock. Kell was saved after three hours.

Kell was lucky with small injuries. He stayed in hospital for two nights. He and his wife will be more careful and stick to safe paths when hiking.

Kell feels lucky and thankful for his wife and rescuers. He plans to be more careful and stop exploring risky places.