

The Spending Review will decide government money. The Home Office and Treasury talk about police money. Some worry police may not get enough.

Peter Kyle says police need to change. The government gave more money, but police should use new ways and technology to get better.

Chris Philp wants more police officers. He thinks the government should spend less on other things to save money for the police.

Schools will get more money for teachers and special needs. The economy is better, but people still find it hard.
