

From 2026, children in families on Universal Credit will get free school meals. This will help families save money and help children learn better.

The plan will help 100,000 kids in England. Free meals help kids do well in school. Before, only families earning under £7,400 got free meals.

The government gives money to food charities for fresh food. The plan includes more breakfast clubs and better school nutrition for children.

The government wants all kids to have equal chances. They're making school uniforms cheaper and giving more childcare hours for working parents.

Free meals for children on Universal Credit will help parents and reduce child poverty.
