

Council tax might go up by 5% each year to help pay for things like police. Councils can do this without asking the government.

The police precept is part of council tax. It helps pay for police. Some leaders want more money to pay police officers.

Councils can raise council tax by 5% to help pay for services like care, police, libraries, and bins. This can increase their spending power.